RICHWOOD CIVIC CENTER NEWSLETTER

November 1776!

The American Revolution hit its lowest point for the Patriot forces. Following defeats in New York, General George Washington's army was pushed into a full-scale, desperate retreat across New Jersey. Pursued closely by Cornwallis, thousands of American soldiers - whose morale was at an all-time low and their enlistments were expiring - simply left for home, reducing Washington's active fighting force to a fragile remnant of around 3,000 men!

16 Nov: The Fall of Fort Washington, NY: In one of the most devastating American defeats of the war, British forces, under General William Howe, captured Fort Washington in northern Manhattan. Surrounded, Patriot Colonel Robert Magaw was forced to surrender and roughly 3,000 of his Continental soldiers were captured or killed. It stands as one of the single largest losses of American troops during the war.

16 Nov: Combat Veteran and Heroic woman - Margaret Corbin: During the defense of Fort Washington, 25 year-old Margaret Corbin took over her husband's cannon after he was killed in battle. She fired continually until she was severely wounded, becoming the first known woman to fight in combat for the Continental Army. A heroic soldier, she was the first woman in United States history to receive a military pension from Congress for her service!

20 Nov: The Capture of Fort Lee, NJ: British forces, led by Lord Charles Cornwallis, scaled the fort's walls and launched a surprise attack! Patriot General Nathanael Greene ordered an immediate, panicked evacuation, abandoning tents, food, and heavy artillery to the British. The retreat nearly ended the Revolutionary War for the Patriots!

21 Nov: The Retreat Begins: With the disastrous loss of both Fort Washington and Fort Lee, General Washington ordered a total retreat to New Jersey. He led the remnants of the Continental Army on a grueling, desperate withdrawal southwest toward the Delaware River, closely pursued by British forces. He sent an urgent command to General Charles Lee in New York to bring reinforcements to New Jeresy! But Lee, who considered him as a superior strategist to Washington, willfully delayed out of spite and ambition.

With Lee stalling, Washington was running out of time. After marching his exhausted, freezing men to the Passaic River, he needed a way to buy the army a few days of breathing room from the British who were on their tail! Th remaining Continental troops scrambled across the Acquackanonk Bridge in NJ. As soon as the last American soldier crossed, Washington ordered his engineers to completely dismantle and chop down the wooden bridge. When the British vanguard arrived at the riverbank shortly after, they found the bridge entirely destroyed. Because the Passaic River was too deep to safely ford on foot, the British army was forced to halt their pursuit and wait for their engineers to construct pontoon bridges and find shallow crossing points.

This desperate act of sabotage saved Washington's army from being completely surrounded and wiped out on the spot, allowing them to continue their retreat toward Newark, NJ and, eventually, the Delaware River.
